Temperament

It's impossible for this not to be relevant to you

We know nurture is important, but what about nature? Temperament is a genetically inherited personal style, which will not change much over the life-span. Where there is a lack of fit between temperament and what is expected of a child, behavior problems tend to develop. It's important to know about temperament, as it is much more effective to work with it than to try to change it.

In this enjoyable series of 4 webinars, we will look at a number of well researched aspects of temperament. You will receive notes on how to respond to these, and how to help children adapt to things which are difficult for them at first. You will gain a clearer understanding of the four temperaments and how they interact in all your relationships. This webinar will also be helpful for self-knowledge and career choice, so invite teens and young adults to join too.
